

The birch trees along the Valøyvegen is very reminiscent of the rythm of the modules that I have placed in the same place as them. This creates about the same facade to the area, except that I elevate the green until the top of the building.

The western side of the plot is the most open, and accessible for the public. I also find many round shaped rocks here, that are neatly organized in a shape.

I have looked at the plot and analysed the many aspects of the site. And I have then tried to place out the activities that can be done here. Some of them can be done in community with other people. Other activities are suitable for doing alone. But Many of the activities can use the same spaces. I have therefore decided to gather activities in groups and tried to design good, common areas for those activities.

View from the plot from Klæbveien. The site is really visible from this area and can be a strategic position for any business.

The round rocks are a repetitive element at the plot. This will be used as an ornamental element in the pathways in the main plan.

Green area:

The green area connects to a path that ends up at Nardo Skole, an Elementary School. This could be a nice place to create a space for studying, so the children can come here after school.
