

Reflection

I am very proud of the work I have done in this project. From the beginning, I have worked structured and hard to reach the goals set by my supervisors and myself. The workload has been more or less evenly distributed over the semester. This made the last weeks of the project less stressful.

I have learned a lot throughout the duration of the project. Before I started, I had limited experience with authentication algorithms and temporal data. During my work, I have studied numerous scientific articles, providing me with insights into the domain of smartphone authentication. I have learned specific accuracy metrics, strategies for authentication, and a lot about the importance of a well-functioning authentication method. The use of temporal data and LSTM networks, provided me with important experience for my future career.